Contents

Foreword, by Clyde F. Barker and Thomas E. Starzl  vii
Acknowledgments  xi
Introduction: Toward the Impossible  xiii

1  Early Transplantation  1
2  The Eighteenth Century  31
3  The Reawakening  49
4  Clinical and Academic Transplantation in Paris  65
5  The Beginning of Organ Transplantation  88
6  The “Lost Era” of Transplantation Immunology  105
7  Anarchy in the 1920s  126
8  Progress in the 1930s  154
9  Understanding the Mechanism  173
10  Experimental Organ Transplantation  195
11  Transplantation Tolerance and Beyond  221
12  Hopes for Radiation Tolerance  254
13  The Emergence of Chemical Immunosuppression  269
14  Support from Hemodialysis and Immunology in the 1960s  296
15  Progress in the Mid-1960s  314
16  Brain Death and the “Year of the Heart”  340
17  The Plateau of the Early 1970s  359
18  The Arrival of Cyclosporine  380
19  Waiting for the Xenografts  413
   Conclusion: Lessons from the History of Transplantation  423

Notes  431
Bibliographic Essay  527
Index  539