

—— CONTENTS ——

FOREWORD by Denise Duhamel	ix
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS	xv
INTRODUCTION	xvii
1988 “like dropping a rose petal down the Grand Canyon and waiting for the echo”	1
1989 in an unlit alcove where bookstore patrons fear to tread	4
1990 to inflame passions, disturb the complacent, and arouse the anxiety of despots	7
1991 a poem entitled “Cigarettes” by a poet named Ash	11
1992 The question of poetry and its audience	14
1993 the gust of fresh air that turned into the blizzard of '93	17
1994 It's safe to say that the inaugural was the best-attended poetry reading of the decade	21
1995 At least somebody played ball in 1994	26
1996 a given volume in this series might hang question marks over all three terms in the title	31
1997 As a gimmick, if that's what it is, National Poetry Month worked	36
THE BEST OF THE BEST AMERICAN POETRY, 1988–1997 (1998) The debate is joined	43

1998	The president spoke of having had to memorize 100 lines of Macbeth	48
1999	“Whitman rocks”	53
2000	“Now I know how poems feel”	62
2001	“Everybody else was analog and Nietzsche was digital”	69
2002	The day now marks a boundary	76
2003	“How many people have to die before you can become president?”	83
2004	canons do not remain fixed for long	92
2005	the creative writing workshop [and] the fall of civilization	99
2006	Accessibility—as a term and, implicitly, as a value	108
2007	Undoubtedly the most parodied of all poems	113
2008	Who says that hot poems can’t get you into trouble in 2008?	120
2009	“that is how I should talk if I could talk poetry”	127
2010	McChrystal sent copies of “The Second Coming” to his special operators	140
2011	in Dickinson’s brain, “wider than the sky”	147
2012	the “uncanny” is a category too little invoked	158
THE BEST OF THE BEST AMERICAN POETRY, 25TH ANNIVERSARY EDITION (2013)
	“Every time I read Pessoa I think”	163
2013	It was his poetry that kept him going	172
2014	In the antagonism between science and the humanities	180
INDEX OF NAMES		193