

CONTENTS

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS IX

INTRODUCTION. “What Else Is Possible”: Multimodal Composing and Genre in the Teaching of Writing

Tracey Bowen and Carl Whithaus I

PART I. Multimodal Pedagogies That Inspire Hybrid Genres

CHAPTER 1. Genre and Transfer in a Multimodal Composition Class
Cheryl E. Ball, Tia Scoffield Bowen, and Tyrell Brent Fenn 15

CHAPTER 2. Back to the Future? The Pedagogical Promise of the (Multimedia) Essay
Erik Ellis 37

CHAPTER 3. Including, but Not Limited to, the Digital: Composing Multimodal Texts
Jody Shipka 73

CHAPTER 4. Something Old, Something New: Integrating Presentation Software into the “Writing” Course
Susan M. Katz and Lee Odell 90

CHAPTER 5. Thinking outside the Text Box: 3-D Interactive, Multimodal Literacy in a College Writing Class
Jerome Bump III

PART II. Multimodal Literacies and Pedagogical Choices

CHAPTER 6. Invention, Ethos, and New Media in the Rhetoric Classroom: The Storyboard as Exemplary Genre

Nathaniel I. Córdova 143

CHAPTER 7. Multimodal Composing, Appropriation, Remediation, and Reflection: Writing, Literature, and Media

Donna Reiss and Art Young 164

CHAPTER 8. Writing, Visualizing, and Research Reports

Penny Kinnear 183

CHAPTER 9. Multimodality, Memory, and Evidence: How the Treasure House of Rhetoric Is Being Digitally Renovated

Julia Romberger 204

PART III. The Changing Structures of Composition Programs

CHAPTER 10. Student Mastery in Metamodal Learning Environments: Moving beyond Multimodal Literacy

Mary Leigh Morbey and Carolyn Steele 225

CHAPTER 11. Multivalent Composition and the Reinvention of Expertise

Tarez Samra Graban, Colin Charlton, and Jonikka Charlton 248

CHAPTER 12. Going Multimodal: Programmatic, Curricular, and Classroom Change

Chanon Adsanatham, Phill Alexander, Kerrie Carsey, Abby Dubisar, Wioleta Fedeczko, Denise Landrum-Geyer, Cynthia Lewiecki-Wilson, Heidi McKee, Kristen Moore, Gina Patterson, and Michele Polak 282

CHAPTER 13. Rhetoric across Modes, Rhetoric across Campus: Faculty and Students Building a Multimodal Curriculum

Traci Fordham and Hillory Oakes 313

CONTRIBUTORS 337

INDEX 345