

Contents

Translator's Preface	ix
Preface	xi
Prologue	xv
1. Buffon and the Inferiority of the Animal Species of America	3
i. The Absence of Large Wild Animals	3
ii. The Deterioration of the Domestic Animals	5
iii. The Hostility of Nature	5
iv. The Impotence of the Savage	6
v. The Cold and Humidity of the American Environment	7
vi. Putrescence and Generation—Water and Life	8
vii. America as a New Continent	14
viii. The Larger Species More Perfect and More Stable than the Small	15
ix. Buffon's Aversion for Minutiae and Small Animals	16
x. Quantitative Criteria and Literary Scruples	21
xi. The Stable Superior to the Changeable: Aristotle	22
xii. Volume and Perfection in Modern Zoology	25
xiii. The Instability and Decadence of the Domestic Species	26
xiv. Reflections on the New World	27
xv. Nomenclature as the Cause of Confusion	28
xvi. Conclusions	29
A. Buffon and Montesquieu	29
B. Zoological Geography: Europe and America	31
C. The New Concept of Species	32
2. Some Figures of the Enlightenment	35
i. Hume and the Inferiority of the Inhabitants of the Tropics	35
ii. Bodin's Theory of Climates	36
iii. The Theory of Climates from Tasso to Hume	39
iv. Voltaire: The Beardless Indian and the Cowardly Lion	42
v. Raynal: America as Immature and the Americans Decrepit	45
vi. Marmontel and the Defense of the Weak and Wretched Americans	50
3. De Pauw and the Inferiority of the Men of America	52
i. Faith in Progress and Society	52
ii. The Americans as Degenerate	53
iii. Exaggerations in the Anti-American Thesis	56
iv. The Causes of the Catastrophe	58
v. Bacon: America a Sodden Continent	60
vi. The Indian as Animal and the Indian as Weaking	63
vii. The Indian a Slave by Nature: Aristotle, Las Casas, and Sepúlveda	67

VIII. Climate and Natural Slavery	74
IX. The Ineffectiveness of the Laws for the Protection of the Indians	76
4. European Reactions to de Pauw	80
I. Reactions Immediate and Delayed	80
II. Pernety and the American Giants	82
III. Pernety Against Buffon: The Counterattack on Europe	86
IV. De Pauw's Answer to Pernety: Degeneration and Progress	88
V. Pernety's Second Offensive: Repetita Minime Juvant	93
VI. De Pauw's Opinion Unaltered	98
VII. The Philosopher La Douceur and the Natives of North America	102
VIII. Paolo Frisi Criticizes de Pauw's Physioclimatic Thesis	108
IX. Delisle de Sales, de Pauw's Admiring Adversary	111
X. The Abbé Roubaud: America and the Physiocrats	117
XI. Galiani: The "Roughcast" Continent and the World of the Future	122
XII. The Glorious Future of the West	129
XIII. Mlle Philipon and Her Schoolfriend	145
XIV. Voltaire, Frederick of Prussia, and de Pauw's Second Recherches	150
XV. Buffon's New Position: America as Immature, but the American Strong and Handsome	154
5. The Second Phase of the Dispute	157
I. The Polemic Expanded and Uplifted	157
II. Robertson and the Vastness and Poverty of Nature in America	158
III. Goldsmith's Songless Birds	161
IV. Robertson and the American Native	165
V. The Explorers of Polynesia: James Cook and George Forster, Horace Walpole and Lord Kames	169
VI. Two Supporters of de Pauw: Daniel Webb and Antonio Fonticelli	179
VII. The Long-lasting Antagonism Between Spaniard and Creole	182
VIII. The Pride of the Creoles	183
IX. The Defense of the Creole: Garcilaso and Feijóo	186
X. The Expulsion of the Jesuits	187
XI. The Spanish Jesuits: Father Nuix Makes Use of de Pauw	191
XII. De Pauw's First American Opponent	194
XIII. The American Jesuits: Father Clavigero	195
A. Fundamental Aim of the Work, the Refutation of de Pauw	197
B. The Arguments Reversed	200
C. The Defense of the Mexican Indian	203
D. Moral Vices, Religion, and Cannibalism	206
E. The Precursors of His Polemical Technique	208
XIV. Father Molina's Natural History of Chile	212
A. The Rehabilitation of Nature in Chile	213
B. Respectful Disagreement with Buffon	215
XV. Fathers Velasco, Jolis, and Peramas: Quito, the Chaco, and the River Plate	217
XVI. Carli's American Letters	233
XVII. Franklin and the North Americans' Stature	240
XVIII. Paine: The Promise of Greatness in America's Nature	245
XIX. Hamilton and Crèvecoeur	250
XX. Thomas Jefferson's Notes on Virginia	252
A. The Mammoth and America's Humidity	254
B. The Animals Compared by Volume	257

- C. The Indios and the Redskins 258
 - D. The White Man in America 262
 - E. Buffon, the Panther, and the Elk 263
- XXI. Filippo Mazzei: Experience Against Idealization and Calumny 268
- XXII. The Botanist Castiglioni and the Lascivious North American Colonists 275
- XXIII. The Vindication of America's Youth 281
- XXIV. Herder and the American Problem 284
- 6. The Reaction to de Pauw in Spanish America 289
 - I. Characteristics of the Latin American Reaction to the European Slanders 289
 - II. Dávalos and the Climate of Peru 291
 - III. Salas and the Happy Earth of Chile 292
 - IV. Iturri and Muñoz's History 293
 - V. Moxó: Mexico Defended by a Spaniard 298
 - VI. Unánue: Lima's Climate and Her Collegians' Erudition 302
 - VII. Dávila Condemarin: A Belated Apology of the University of San Marcos 305
 - VIII. Caldas and the Cold in New Granada 308
 - IX. The Mexican S. T. de Mier and de Pauw in the Cortes of Cadiz 312
 - X. Other Reactions in Latin America: The Youthfulness of the New World 316
 - XI. The Honduran J. C. del Valle and the Mission of America 317
- 7. Hegel and His Contemporaries 325
 - I. The Americans Politically Dismissed and Their Zoological Problems Dissolved 325
 - II. Kant: A New Opinion of the American 329
 - III. Thomas Moore: A Wretched People in a Splendid Land 335
 - IV. Volney and Perrin du Lac: Criticisms of the North Americans 339
 - V. Keats: The Flight of the Dryads 343
 - VI. Byron and Shelley: The Recherches sur les Grecs and the Radiant Destiny of the United States 346
 - VII. Chateaubriand: America's Pernicious Splendor 352
 - VIII. Goethe: An America Without Basalt or Manor Houses 358
 - IX. Lenau: The Promised Land Becomes the Accursed Land 372
 - X. Leopardi: America's Decadence Becomes Universal 380
 - XI. De Maistre: The Degeneration of the American Savage 389
 - XII. Fabre d'Olivet: America Rejected by the Theosophists 395
 - XIII. The Reaction of the Scientists: Barton and Humboldt 402
 - A. Benjamin Smith Barton and the Learned North Americans 402
 - B. Humboldt's Enthusiasm for Tropical America 405
 - C. His Criticisms of Buffon and de Pauw 409
 - XIV. Hegel: America Immature and Impotent 417
 - A. Overall Judgment, Severe and Impassive 417
 - B. The Restoration of the Philosophy of Nature 418
 - C. Radical Antievolutionism 420
 - D. The Impotence of Nature 422
 - E. Deduction of the Hemispheres and the Continents 423
 - F. Old World and New World 424
 - G. The Impotence of America in Its Fauna 426
 - H. The American Birds and Their Songs 429

i. The Savage as Man of Nature	430
j. The American Aborigines	431
k. Contemporary America: America and the "Spirits of Peoples"	433
l. The United States and South America	435
m. The Character of Hegel's Error	438
n. The Thesis Less Vigorous in Hegel Than in Buffon	439
o. The Historicization and Dissolution of the Thesis	440
p. The Chain of Being and the Old Metaphysics	440
8. The Dispute's Trivialization and Obstinate Vitality	442
i. Dislocation of the Terms of the Polemic After Hegel	442
ii. Friedrich Schlegel: The Zoological and Anthropological Poverty of America	445
iii. Zoologists and Anthropologists: Guano and the Savages	449
iv. Darwin: The South American Fauna and the Evolution of the Species	454
v. Schopenhauer: America's Animals and Savages as Decadent or Imperfect Forms	456
vi. The Saint-Simonians and Auguste Comte	459
vii. Edgar Quinet: The Insularity of America and the Triumph of the Humblest Creatures	464
viii. British Criticisms of American Society: Frances Wright and Mrs. Trollope	468
ix. Echoes of Mrs. Trollope: Pro-Americanism and Anti-Americanism in Stendhal and Jacquemont	479
x. Other Critics of the Right: Anthony Trollope and Thomas Hamilton	487
xi. Critics of the Left: Miss Martineau and Captain Marryat	491
xii. Dickens: Nature and Society Equally Putrescent	497
xiii. Reactions in the United States	508
a. Emerson and the Freshness of American Culture	508
b. Lowell and Melville: Messianism and Desperation	513
c. Thoreau: Primitivism Rediscovered	519
d. Walt Whitman: The Athletic Democracy's Emphatic Oracles	529
xiv. The Polemic's Last Metamorphosis: Immigrants and Expatriates	543
xv. The Young World Quite Old	552
xvi. De Pauw's Oblivion and Secret Immortality	556
xvii. The Scientific Revision of the Buffonian Calumny	560
9. Supplements and Digressions	565
i. The Originality of Buffon	565
ii. The Tropicalization of the White Man	571
iii. The Mexicans' Human Sacrifices	576
iv. The Impotence of Nature	579
v. The Quakers, the Marquis, and the Girondist	584
vi. A Latecomer and His Disciple: Drouin de Bercy and Giuseppe Compagnoni	603
Bibliography of Works Cited	631
Suggestions for Further Research	655
Index	671